

NIFTY IT Weekly Review

Week ending 01 Oct 2026 · Data: Yahoo Finance · for educational purposes, not investment advice

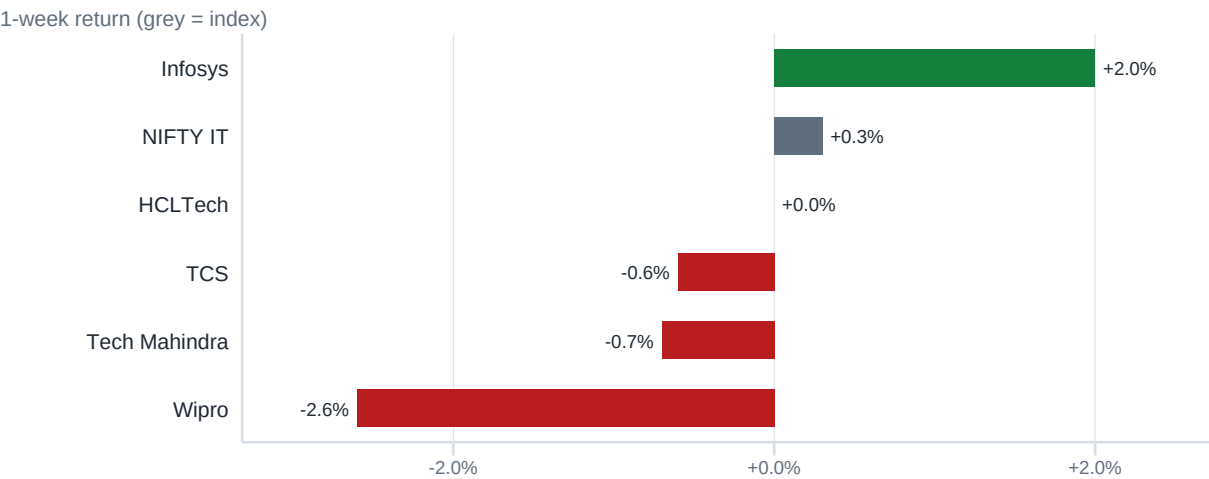

Summary

The NIFTY IT index eked out a modest weekly gain of +0.3% while still sitting 28.3% below its 52-week high, underscoring a broadly bearish backdrop that has seen the sector down -10.1% over the past month. Infosys was the clear outlier, jumping +2.0% on the week and riding the broader AI-focused rally that lifted its peers, whereas the other majors either slipped or were flat. Tech Mahindra, despite a small weekly dip of -0.7%, remains the only stock with a positive 1-year return (+13.5%), highlighting its relative resilience amid sector-wide weakness. The mixed moves suggest that recent contract wins and AI initiatives are not yet enough to reverse the overall downtrend, and volatility stays elevated, with the index at 20% and the peers ranging up to 31%.

Company notes

TCS

Rs 2,075 · week -0.6% · month -11.6% · 1 year -25.5%

TCS closed at Rs 2,075, down -0.6% for the week, lagging the NIFTY IT's modest +0.3% gain and trailing the index by about 0.9 percentage points. Over the past month the stock has fallen -11.6%, a steeper decline than the index's -10.1%, while its 1-year slide of -25.5% remains deeper than the NIFTY IT's -16.6% loss. The recent headlines – a July 8 preview of Q1 2027 earnings, the July 10 earnings-call recap, a July 12 AI-engineer expansion plan, a July 27 partnership with F1R3FLY, and a September 1 dividend-anchor piece – do not directly explain the modest weekly dip. Consequently, the move appears driven more by broader market dynamics than any single news event.

Infosys

Rs 1,035 · week +2.0% · month -9.2% · 1 year -25.8%

Infosys closed at Rs 1,035, up +2.0% for the week, outpacing the NIFTY IT's modest +0.3% gain. Its volatility of 31% also remains well above the index's 20%, reflecting a sharper price swing. The recent jump was highlighted in “Why Did Infosys Stock Pop on Thursday?” (2026-10-02), while the broader AI-focused rally noted in “Accenture Soars 23% ... Infosys Jumps 8%” (2026-10-01) provides additional context. Earlier collaborations, such as the “Infosys, Abn Amro Expand IT Services Collaboration” piece (2026-09-30), are older and do not directly explain the latest move.

Wipro

Rs 159 · week -2.6% · month -10.0% · 1 year -31.4%

Wipro closed at Rs 159, down -2.6% for the week, while the NIFTY IT index edged up +0.3% in the same period. Both stocks have slipped about 10% over the past month, with Wipro at -10.0% versus the index's -10.1%, underscoring a broadly bearish short-term trend in the sector. Recent headlines such as “Wipro Renews Digital Workplace Services Contract With ABB” (2026-09-02) and “Oracle Partners with Wipro to Strengthen End-to-End Pharmacovigilance Services” (2026-09-22) are relatively fresh but do not appear to have offset the overall weakness, and the older “Is SAP Undervalued On Its Wipro And Aramco STO360 Launch?” piece (2026-09-24) offers no clear catalyst for the price move.

HCLTech

Rs 1,243 · week +0.0% · month -6.6% · 1 year -6.8%

HCLTech closed the week flat at Rs 1,243, lagging the NIFTY IT's modest +0.3% weekly gain. Over the past month the stock is down -6.6%, a narrower decline than the index's -10.1%, while both remain roughly a quarter below their 52-week highs (-26.0% vs. -28.3%). The company's volatility of 26% also exceeds the index's 20%, reflecting a more erratic price path. Recent headlines – the acquisition of HPE's Telco Solutions business (2026-08-03) and the launch of an AI-based synthetic research study for wealth management (2026-09-28) – are relatively recent, but none directly explain the modest price movement observed this week.

Tech Mahindra

Rs 1,533 · week -0.7% · month -5.5% · 1 year +13.5%

Tech Mahindra closed at Rs 1,533, down -0.7% for the week, versus the NIFTY IT's modest +0.3% gain. Over the past month the stock slipped -5.5%, outperforming the index's sharper -10.1% decline, while its 1-year return of +13.5% contrasts with the NIFTY IT's -16.6% performance. The share's volatility (21%) is only marginally above the index's 20%, and it remains -11.1% off its 52-week high. No recent headline directly explains the week's move, though earlier reports (e.g., the Aug 20 ServiceNow partnership) highlight ongoing strategic initiatives.
